CITY HALL PLAZA

Long a source of controversy, Boston City Hall and its surrounding plaza has had its share of critics over the years. As tens of thousands of concert-goers flock to the area for the biannual Boston Calling music festival (refer to story, page 8) over the last weekend in September to see such popular acts as The Avett Brothers, Alabama Shakes and Alt-J, the checkered history of this concrete and brick expanse will likely be the furthest thing from their minds.

When the decision to replace Boston's Old City Hall—which still stands on School Street—was made in the early 1960s, a new location was chosen in close proximity to city landmarks Faneuil Hall, Quincy Market and Boston Common, as well as key neighborhoods such as the North End and Beacon Hill. The problem, however, was that Scollay Square—considered seedy and run-down due to its many burlesque theaters and rowdy bars popular with sailors on shore leave—stood on the proposed site, which had been a target for demolition by the city since the 1950s. Eventually, the city got its way, and the more than 500,000 square foot area was cleared. Armed with $40 million in federal grant money, Government Center took shape from 1963–1968.

Designed by the new architectural firm Kallmann McKinnell and Knowles, Boston City Hall and City Hall Plaza—although done in what was then considered the cutting-edge, modern style known as Brutalism—was meant to represent classical forms. Initially lauded by architecture critics, the imposing concrete mass and the wind-swept and irregularly shaped space surrounding it elicited a less-than-positive reaction from the public, leading to ridicule from pundits in more recent years. Yet despite its perceived inhospitable nature, City Hall Plaza is used annually for such events as Boston Harborfest and the Boston Pride Festival, and it has been the site of many concerts, civic gatherings and championship celebrations for the region's various sports teams.

In response to the love-hate relationship city residents and visitors have had with City Hall Plaza, many improvements have either been made or proposed over the decades. One change now underway is the reconstruction of the Government Center MBTA subway stop underneath the plaza, which will include a striking, glass-enclosed surface structure to replace the former bunker-like entrance. This is set to debut in the spring of 2016. Mayor Marty Walsh recently solicited proposals for changes to the plaza, and current plans to revitalize the area involve the planting of dozens of additional trees in order to break up the red brick expanse. —Scott Roberto

FUN AND GAMES

How do you make one of Boston's most popular destinations even more enticing? At historic shopping, dining and entertainment center Faneuil Hall Marketplace (refer to listing, page 26), this was accomplished by adding free games and activities. The Lounge at Faneuil Hall Marketplace is an outdoor area added earlier this year that features everything from billiards tables, ping pong and chess to magic shows, storytelling and board games for the kids. And that's not all. September 22 from 6–8 p.m. is Swing Night, highlighted by live music and dance lessons, while art-making takes center stage September 17 & 22 from 5:30–7:30 p.m. with Après Work Painting and again on September 25–27 with the three-day Paint Out, in which all participants are invited to paint outdoors and eventually compete for prizes. And if that's not enough excitement, check out the Fall Street Performer Festival September 19 & 20.

LOOKING EAST

After garnering years of acclaim for their award-winning sushi restaurant O Ya in the Leather District, husband-and-wife team Tim and Nancy Cushman have finally opened their long-awaited second Boston venture, Hojoko (1271 Boylston St., 617-670-0507, hojokoboston.com). Located at the self-billed "rock & roll hotel" The Verb in The Fenway neighborhood right next to iconic Fenway Park, this playful space offers diners modern takes on sushi, robata (Japanese-styled grilled meats and fish) and more, plus a fun, irreverent, pop-culture-inspired decor, complete with vintage tabletop arcade games (pictured). The bar is another highlight, featuring a wide selection of sake, Japanese and American beers, and Japanese-inspired craft cocktails.

CALLING ALL MUSIC FANS

Now in its third year, the biannual Boston Calling music festival (refer to listing, page 14) has continually delighted local music lovers with its diverse lineups of acts ranging in genre from indie rock to hip-hop to electronic dance music, always seeming to get the choice picks of some of the hottest touring bands in the country. This fall's edition, staged September 25–27 at City Hall Plaza, is no different—Friday's performers include the roots-influenced The Avett Brothers and chart-topping Icelandic band Of Monsters and Men, while the weekend features Southern rockers Alabama Shakes, British alternative rock heroes Alt-J, soulful Irish singer/songwriter Hozier (pictured) and power-popsters Walk the Moon. —Scott Roberto

INSIDERS BOSTON

Looking for an alternative to the city's must-see destinations? Then check out some of the Hub's most overlooked attractions BY SCOTT ROBERTO

BOSTON HARBOR ISLANDS (refer to listing, page 42): As America's oldest public park, Boston Common (refer to listing, page 49) gets a lot of love. One of Boston's most beautiful natural areas, however, is located nowhere near land. One of the city's greatest resources for sightseeing, recreation and relaxation are the 34 islands making up this national park. Ferries to Georges and Spectacle islands depart daily from Long Wharf.

DORCHESTER HEIGHTS MONUMENT (Thomas Park, 95 G St., nps.gov/bost): Located on the Freedom Trail, the Bunker Hill Monument (refer to listing, page 50) is one of Boston's most famous historic markers. In South Boston, however, lies another significant memorial to a pivotal moment of the American Revolution: March 17, 1776, the day George Washington and the Continental Army drove the British from Boston by placing an array of cannons on the hill topped by this tower.

THE MARK BAKER EDDY LIBRARY (refer to listing, page 18): When visiting The Fenway, many culture lovers visit the Museum of Fine Arts (refer to listing, page 19) and the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum (refer to listing, page 18). Also make time to check out the home of the Mapparium, a three-story, stained-glass globe depicting the world as it appeared in 1935. Also enjoy informative displays, including one on the life and work of Christian Science founder Mary Baker Eddy.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH (401 Hanover St., 617-742-4715, socstjames.com): Located right near the famed Old North Church (refer to listing, page 50) in the North End, this house of worship dating back to 1804 was once known as the New North Church and is the last remaining church left in Boston designed by the father of American architecture, Charles Bulfinch. It even features a bell cast by none other than Paul Revere. In 1862, when it acquired its current name, the edifice became part of Catholic Archdiocese of Boston. Kennedy clan matriarch Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy was baptized here in 1890.

WARREN ANATOMICAL MUSEUM (10 Shattuck St., 617-432-6196, legacy.countway.harvard.edu/menuNavigation/chom/warren.html): Science fans have made Boston's Museum of Science (refer to listing, page 18) one of the city's top attractions. For a more intimate take on the mysteries of human biology, however, take a trip to the Longwood Medical Area, home to this cabinet of curiosities housing historical medical instruments, specimens, models and more.

NORTH END

Fabulous cuisine, shopping and history are abundant in Boston's Little Italy

Italian culture reigns in the North End, Boston's oldest and busiest neighborhood. The sweet scent of fresh cannoli rises from countless Italian bakeries that populate this district's narrow cobblestone streets, while the veritable buffet of dining choices will have you wishing there were more than three meals to enjoy in a day. Recently, clothing and home decor boutiques have been setting up shop here, making the North End an even more diverse and desirable destination. Don't even try to find a parking space—it's best to hop on the T or walk. If you happen to be strolling The Freedom Trail, you'll discover three of the North End's most important historical sites: The Paul Revere House, Copp's Hill Burying Ground and the Old North Church. Summertime brings people into the streets to celebrate various Italian feasts with music, socializing and, of course, sensational food.

NORTH END HISTORIC SITES

Five must-see spots on and off the Freedom Trail

PAUL REVERE HOUSE (19 North Square, 617-523-2338, paulreverehouse.org, pictured): The oldest standing residence in Boston, this historic home was built around 1680 and was home to its namesake and his family from 1770–1800. This well-preserved Colonial-era edifice is a stop on the Freedom Trail.

OLD NORTH CHURCH (193 Salem St., 617-523-6676, oldnorth.org): Remember "one if by land, two if by sea" from your U.S. History class? This is the spot from where the signal was sent that alerted revolution-minded colonists of British troop movements in 1775. Officially known as Christ Church and still an active house of worship, this famed lantern-hanging site was built in 1723 and is a favorite fixture on the Freedom Trail.

COPP'S HILL BURYING GROUND (Hull Street): Founded in 1659, this is the city's second oldest cemetery, after fellow Freedom Trail site King's Chapel Burying Ground (1630). Interred here are the Mather family of Puritan preachers, Edmund Hartt (builder of the USS Constitution) and Robert Newman, the man who hung the signal lanterns in the steeple of the Old North Church on the eve of the American Revolution.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH (401 Hanover St.): The only church left in Boston designed by the father of American architecture Charles Bulfinch, St. Stephen's—originally a Congregationalist house of worship known as the New North Church when it was dedicated in 1804—is an active Catholic Church. Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy, native North Ender and matriarch of the iconic political family, was baptized here in 1890.

CLOUGH HOUSE (21 Unity St.): Located next to the Old North Church, this 18th-century home today hosts Captain Jackson's Historic Chocolate Shop, where visitors can learn how cocoa confections were made in pre-Revolution days, and the Printing Office of Edes & Gill, a replica of a Colonial Era print shop complete with historical interpreters who demonstrate how their vintage equipment was used. —Scott Roberto

NORTH END SHOPPING

Once known strictly for its assortment of Italian restaurants and bakeries, the North End has leapt boldly into the 21st century as one of the city's up-and-coming retail districts.

BEACON HILL

An old-world feeling awaits you in this quaint part of the city

Strolling along Beacon Hill's picturesque gas-lit streets, brick sidewalks and Federal-style row houses, it's not uncommon to feel as though you've traveled back in time. Both eminently posh and utterly accommodating, this area has borne witness to much of the city's storied past. The State House—with its gleaming gold dome—sits on the peak of the hill where the beacon for which the district was named used to reside. In this neighborhood, visitors can also find the African Meeting House, which holds the Museum of African-American History, as well as the Bull and Finch Pub, the inspiration for the popular TV show, "Cheers." Charles Street, located at the flat of the hill, is lined with boutiques, restaurants, cafes and charming hotels. Locals descend the hill daily to enjoy all that Charles Street has to offer, adding to the feeling of small-town charm.

Created in 1959 to preserve the sites associated with the opening battles of the American Revolution, Minute Man Park consists of more than 900 acres of land along original segments of the Battles of Lexington and Concord, including Lexington Green and Concord's North Bridge, as well as The Wayside, the 19th-century home of literary greats Nathaniel Hawthorne and Louisa May Alcott.

PROVINCETOWN

Located on the tip of Cape Cod, Provincetown marches to its own beat. This New England fishing village and prominent art colony is home to a thriving gay community, and is also where playwright Eugene O'Neill penned some of his best work and Thoreau completed his walk around the Cape. Provincetown boasts miles of beaches, a charming and eclectic shopping district, trails for hiking and biking, and whale watches for those looking to escape the busy city.

SALEM

This North Shore town is known for the Salem Witch Trials of 1692, but Salem also boasts a bustling wharf with many bars and restaurants, and is regarded as an up-and-coming enclave for the young and trendy. Fans of spooky stuff can visit the New England Pirate Museum or tiptoe through the Salem Witch Museum or Witch Dungeon Museum. On Halloween, the city transforms into one giant party for ghosts and ghouls, but 365 days a year, Salem is a charming place to explore and enjoy.

CRAFTING HISTORY

Plimoth Plantation's NORAH MESSIER and VICKI OMAN bring traditional crafts to life

"IT'S A CELEBRATION OF A CONTINUED, shared heritage," explains Norah Messier (above left) of Plimoth Plantation's second annual #i{craft}history celebration. #i{craft}history is an innovative weekend-long event dedicated to craft and community. "People perceive history as being over," Messier, Director of Living Collections, Crafts, Trades and Domestic Skills, shared. "History is a part of us. Someone who knits today is a part of the heritage of that craft."

Messier along with Vicki Oman, Director of Museum Programs and School Services, are two of the driving forces behind the September 26 and 27 event. Both women have worked in every aspect of the museum and their passion is electric. "What we're doing is recreating the past," Oman said. "Our goal is to make history accessible." And fun.

Re-creating history is part of Plimoth Plantation's daily mission. Artisans and archeologists from all over the country use actual artifacts, written accounts, renderings and archaeological recordings to build houses, farm, bake, re-create textiles and make items ranging from pottery to porcupine hair headdresses. "We try to synthesize as much information as possible to be as accurate as we can," Oman said.

In addition to featuring Plimoth Plantation's staff artisans, #i{craft}history features European, English and Native American guest handcrafters across a wide array of disciplines, from beekeeping to weaving, to demonstrate and teach diverse skills. Visitors can enjoy hands-on activities (appropriate for all ages), entertainment, a book signing and a Sunday farmer's marketplace. New to this year's event is an artisan market located in the museum's Henry Hornblower II Visitor Center courtyard, where guests may purchase items crafted by featured artisans.

"We'll also be celebrating a first birthday," Messier added. "Plimoth Bread Company has completed its first year." Instead of cake, master artisan baker Tani Mauriello demonstrates the wood-fired techniques of making 17th-century-inspired thirded bread—which is naturally low in gluten and delicious!
