THE SKULL OF PHINEAS GAGE

Boston's status as "The Hub of the Universe" is up for debate, yet there's no dispute over the city's role as one of the foremost centers of the medical world. Given Boston's long history as a hotbed of innovation and research, it's no surprise that there's quite a bit of medical history to explore here. One of the more unusual spots to uncover modern medicine's past is the Warren Anatomical Museum (10 Shattuck St., 617-432-6196, legacy.countway.harvard.edu/menuNavigation/chom/warren.html) run by Harvard University.

Located on the fifth floor of the Countway Library of Medicine in Boston's Longwood Medical Area, the museum—open Monday–Friday from 9 a.m.–5 p.m.—contains an assortment of medical artifacts and specimens dating back to the late 18th century, when the museum's namesake, pioneering surgeon and Harvard professor John Collins Warren (1778–1856), began the collection that he eventually donated to the school. One if its most famous and sought-out objects is the skull of railway construction foreman Phineas Gage (1823–1860). And just how did the skull of a 19th century railroad worker end up at such a prestigious institute, you may ask? The answer, in a manner of speaking, is by accident.

Working in Cavendish, Vermont, in 1848, Gage suffered an impalement through his head by a nearly four-foot-long tamping iron after an accidental explosion. Miraculously, he survived, although he was never the same again. The formerly well-liked man became irreverent, impatient and indecisive—by some accounts, a completely different person. Gage moved around and held a few odd jobs until his death, which was brought on by epileptic seizures. Despite this tragedy, much was learned about the relationship between personality and the functioning of the brain's frontal lobe by studying his case.

Gage's body was exhumed in 1867 for further study, and his skull, the tamping iron that penetrated it and a plaster cast of his head soon made their way into the Warren's collection, where they continue to elicit wonder and speculation about the mysteries of the human brain. —Scott Roberto

HUB

ART SCHOOLED

During its relatively short existence, the experimental liberal arts institution Black Mountain College in North Carolina exerted an outsized influence on art in the 20th century for such a small school. Boston's Institute of Contemporary Art (refer to listing, page 18) takes a look back at those halcyon days in the new exhibit Leap Before You Look: Black Mountain College 1933–1957. Highlighting works by nearly 90 artists—including such internationally famed creators as Josef Albers, John Cage, Merce Cunningham, Robert Rauschenberg, Willem de Kooning, Buckminster Fuller and Robert Motherwell, who all either taught or studied at the college—this display presents a time capsule of an era and place that valued the arts—all arts, including dance, pottery, painting, weaving, sculpture, poetry, and music—equally, believing they provided an essential foundation for citizenship in a democratic society.

EVER GREEN

After a surprising post-season appearance last spring, the Boston Celtics (refer to listing, page 16) would seem to be poised for bigger and better things in the 2015–2016 NBA campaign. Off-season acquisitions like David Lee (pictured) and the continued maturation of young stars like point guard Marcus Smart—along with the expert leadership of head coach Brad Stevens—have many fans thinking that not only is a playoff berth possible, but a long run in the playoffs is inevitable. Before we get ahead of ourselves, however, the boys in green need to tip off the season, an event which takes place at the TD Garden on October 28 against the Philadelphia 76ers. Other upcoming home games include contests against the Toronto Raptors on October 30, the San Antonio Spurs on November 1 and the Washington Wizards on November 6.

RESTAURANT RESURRECTION

The long-gone Locke-Ober was a bastion of Boston fine dining for more than a century before it closed its doors in 2012. Like a phoenix from the ashes, however, rises Yvonne's (2 Winter Place, 617-267-0047, yvonnesboston.com). Billed as a "modern supper club" and tucked away behind the back of a salon at 50 Temple Place near Downtown Crossing, this new endeavor named for the members-only lounge area from its previous incarnation promises international cuisine and impeccable service in uber-chic surroundings, which have been meticulously preserved from the Locke-Ober days. Small, shareable plates influenced by cuisine from the Middle East, Mediterranean, Asia and Europe are featured, while the bar program feeds into the club-like conceit, featuring rare wines, select beers, and both classic and innovative cocktails.

A MODERN OUTLOOK

Located at the brand-new Envoy Hotel in the red-hot Seaport District, Outlook Kitchen and Bar (70 Sleeper St., 617-530-1559, theenvoyhotel.com) jumps into an increasingly vibrant scene. Perched on the edge of the Fort Point Channel, Outlook boasts a seasonal menu of flatbreads, salads, and both small and large plates to fit any appetite. One distinguishing characteristic beyond the ultra-modern decor and open kitchen is the addition of live music five nights a week. Also, the bar highlights hand-made craft cocktails, craft brews, small-batch bourbons, single-malt scotches, carefully selected wines, fresh juices and mixers, house-made sodas and even a special beer brewed specifically for the eatery by nearby Harpoon Brewery, adding up to a promising outlook indeed.

NEW KID ON THE BLOCK

The quintessential Irish-American stronghold of South Boston has certainly evolved over the last several years. There's no greater evidence of this than the recent debut of Worden Hall (22 West Broadway, 617-752-4206, wordenhall.com), a new gastropub located across from the Broadway stop on the MBTA's Red Line that has been cited as one of "The 10 Hottest New Restaurants in Boston" by Zagat. Artwork on the walls—as well as the restaurant's name—evokes owner Dylan Welsh's love for his horse-racing hometown, Saratoga Springs in upstate New York. With upscale comfort food, floor-to-ceiling windows, 40 beers on tap and even a bar covered in bright new pennies, Worden Hall looks to shine in this 'hood for years to come. —Scott Roberto

PANORAMA's GUIDE TO HAUNTED BOSTON

The Hub has accumulated its share of eeriness over the centuries. Get in the Halloween spirit at these spooky sites around Greater Boston BY SCOTT ROBERTO

Edgar Allan Poe statue

Native son Edgar Allan Poe's disdain for the city of his birth was mostly due to his dislike for Boston's long-gone literary establishment, so it's strange that it took until last fall for a proper local tribute. The Poe Returning to Boston statue by Stefanie Rocknak—located a few blocks from Poe's birthplace—depicts the Master of the Macabre with a raven, a human heart and scattered books that fly from his suitcase, creating an appropriately dramatic effect.
Edgar Allan Poe Square, corner of Boylston and Charles streets

Boston Common

The country's oldest public park is the site of many ghost stories, particularly the spot marked by a plaque (above) where the Great Elm once stood. The infamous tree saw many public hangings until 1817, and many people report getting uneasy feelings in that area.

Enjoy the Grave Undertakings: Boston's Burying Grounds walking tour on October 24 & 31 at 1 p.m., or thrill to the special Beacon Hill with a BOO! tour on October 31 at 6 p.m., which highlights holiday decorations (pictured) as well as the neighborhood's dark history.

Salem Haunted Happenings

Just north of Boston lies the city best known for the infamous Salem Witch Trials of 1692. What better place for one of the biggest Halloween celebration around? Haunted Happenings occurs throughout October and feature tours, magic shows, historical presentations, haunted houses, live seances, a carnival and several costume parties, along with a 5K race and children's parade on October 17 and a fireworks finale on October 31.

Boston Athenæum

This venerable Beacon Hill library is home to a rather disturbing volume about notorious 19th century highwayman James Allen that is bound in its subject's skin. If any book in Boston is haunted, it's this one.

Revel in the silly side of the season at this store—in business since 1965—located in Cambridge's Inman Square. Rent or buy Halloween costumes and accessories for all ages, from the scary to the goofy to the just plain outrageous.

Historic cemeteries

The Freedom Trail boasts three historic cemeteries—the Old Granary, King's Chapel and Copp's Hill burying grounds—which can be creepy day or night. Don't forget Central Burying Ground (pictured) on Boston Common, where the ghost of a little girl has been spotted.

Omni Parker House

This historic hotel, the oldest in the country and the place where Boston cream pie was invented, has seen guests come and go over the years, yet apparently some never left. Spirits allegedly haunt the halls here, including the spectre of founder Harvey Parker.

BACK BAY

This famous neighborhood is truly the hub of the Hub

Exquisite architecture and world-class retailers are plentiful in Boston's most well-known neighborhood. The Victorian brick and brownstone residences that line the streets are not only beautiful, they're widely regarded as the best-preserved examples of 19th-century urban design in the United States. Newbury and Boylston streets, where luxury shops vie for space amidst outstanding restaurants, welcome visitors and residents alike. Back Bay is also home to the iconic Prudential Tower, Trinity Church, Boston Public Library, the John Hancock Tower and two sprawling shopping malls connected by a climate-controlled bridge. You'll also find standout salons, spas, antique shops and galleries throughout. Nightlife thrives in Back Bay as well, where chic hotel bars, world-class restaurants and swanky lounges abound.

BACK BAY ARCHITECTURAL TREASURES

Five notable landmarks representing the best in Boston architecture

TRINITY CHURCH (206 Clarendon St., Copley Square, 617-536-0944, trinitychurchboston.org, pictured): Often hailed as the most significant building in the city, this 1877 house of worship was designed by famed architect H.H. Richardson in a style that would come to be known as "Richardsonian Romanesque." Richardson created outstanding buildings around the U.S., but this is considered his masterpiece.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY (700 Boylston St., Copley Square, 617-536-5400, bpl.org): Two notable designers contributed to this historic edifice: Charles Follen McKim crafted the older, classical original in 1895, while modern architect Philip Johnson was responsible for the addition that debuted in 1972.

JOHN HANCOCK TOWER (200 Clarendon St.): Situated in Copley Square along with the previous two entries, this mirrored skyscraper—the tallest in New England—was designed by I.M. Pei & Partners, the creators of the glass pyramids at the Louvre. Despite early controversy and design flaws, the building has become a beloved part of the Back Bay skyline.

NEW OLD SOUTH CHURCH (645 Boylston St., 617-536-1970, oldsouth.org): This National Historic Landmark, built in the ornate Venetian Gothic style by Charles Amos Cummings and Willard T. Sears for one of the oldest religious congregations in the country, is punctuated by a 246-foot tower and a striking copper cupola over the main sanctuary.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE PLAZA (Huntington Avenue, between Belvidere Street and Massachusetts Avenue, christianscience.com): Another project by I.M. Pei & Partners completed in the early 1970s, this open area, boasting a huge reflecting pool and spray fountain, unifies the many buildings on the church's campus, including the Romanesque Original Mother Church of 1894, its 1906 extension capped by a massive Byzantine-style dome and the 1934 Christian Science Publishing House, home to the Mary Baker Eddy Library and its stained-glass Mapparium. —Scott Roberto

NORTH END

Fabulous cuisine, shopping and history are abundant in Boston's Little Italy

Italian culture reigns in the North End, Boston's oldest and busiest neighborhood. The sweet scent of fresh cannoli rises from countless Italian bakeries that populate this district's narrow cobblestone streets, while the veritable buffet of dining choices will have you wishing there were more than three meals to enjoy in a day. Recently, clothing and home decor boutiques have been setting up shop here, making the North End an even more diverse and desirable destination. Don't even try to find a parking space—it's best to hop on the T or walk. If you happen to be strolling The Freedom Trail, you'll discover three of the North End's most important historical sites: The Paul Revere House, Copp's Hill Burying Ground and the Old North Church. Summertime brings people into the streets to celebrate various Italian feasts with music, socializing and, of course, sensational food.

NORTH END HISTORIC SITES

Five must-see spots on and off the Freedom Trail

PAUL REVERE HOUSE (19 North Square, 617-523-2338, paulreverehouse.org, pictured): The oldest standing residence in Boston, this historic home was built around 1680 and was home to its namesake and his family from 1770–1800. This well-preserved Colonial-era edifice is a stop on the Freedom Trail.

OLD NORTH CHURCH (193 Salem St., 617-523-6676, oldnorth.org): Remember "one if by land, two if by sea" from your U.S. History class? This is the spot from where the signal was sent that alerted revolution-minded colonists of British troop movements in 1775. Officially known as Christ Church and still an active house of worship, this famed lantern-hanging site was built in 1723 and is a favorite fixture on the Freedom Trail.

COPP'S HILL BURYING GROUND (Hull Street): Founded in 1659, this is the city's second oldest cemetery, after fellow Freedom Trail site King's Chapel Burying Ground (1630). Interred here are the Mather family of Puritan preachers, Edmund Hartt (builder of the USS Constitution) and Robert Newman, the man who hung the signal lanterns in the steeple of the Old North Church on the eve of the American Revolution.

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH (401 Hanover St.): The only church left in Boston designed by the father of American architecture Charles Bulfinch, St. Stephen's—originally a Congregationalist house of worship known as the New North Church when it was dedicated in 1804—is an active Catholic Church. Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy, native North Ender and matriarch of the iconic political family, was baptized here in 1890.

CLOUGH HOUSE (21 Unity St.): Located next to the Old North Church, this 18th-century home today hosts Captain Jackson's Historic Chocolate Shop, where visitors can learn how cocoa confections were made in pre-Revolution days, and the Printing Office of Edes & Gill, a replica of a Colonial Era print shop complete with historical interpreters who demonstrate how their vintage equipment was used. —Scott Roberto

NORTH END SHOPPING

Once known strictly for its assortment of Italian restaurants and bakeries, the North End has leapt boldly into the 21st century as one of the city's up-and-coming retail districts.

BEACON HILL

An old-world feeling awaits you in this quaint part of the city

Strolling along Beacon Hill's picturesque gas-lit streets, brick sidewalks and Federal-style row houses, it's not uncommon to feel as though you've traveled back in time. Both eminently posh and utterly accommodating, this area has borne witness to much of the city's storied past. The State House—with its gleaming gold dome—sits on the peak of the hill where the beacon for which the district was named used to reside. In this neighborhood, visitors can also find the African Meeting House, which holds the Museum of African-American History, as well as the Bull and Finch Pub, the inspiration for the popular TV show, "Cheers." Charles Street, located at the flat of the hill, is lined with boutiques, restaurants, cafes and charming hotels. Locals descend the hill daily to enjoy all that Charles Street has to offer, adding to the feeling of small-town charm.

BRINGING A LEGEND TO LIFE

Sculptor STEFANIE ROCKNAK talks about her role in creating one of Boston's newest landmarks

WHEN THE EDGAR ALLAN POE Foundation of Boston held a contest in 2012 to determine who would be awarded a commission to create a statue commemorating the Master of the Macabre's Boston roots, they "didn't want 'Poe on a horse,'" explains sculptor Stefanie Rocknak. "Immediately it occurred to me that I had to do something dynamic and different." Rocknak's winning statue, called Poe Returning to Boston, is certainly that.

Poe's relationship with his birthplace was turbulent, since his dark literary style was often criticized by the Boston elite, whom he ridiculed in turn. Yet Rocknak says that Poe loved aspects of Boston, "namely, that he was born there and his mother had a fairly successful career as an actress there." Rocknak's winning design shows Poe running along at the intersection of Boylston and Charles streets near the Common, heralded by his trademark raven and leaving a trail of fluttering manuscripts in his wake, "moving away from the stuff he doesn't like about Boston…to what he loved." To make the statue, Rocknak left her usual woodcarving to build a clay model that was cast in bronze, but she did not abandon her signature style. "I tend to exaggerate certain things, to exaggerate movement or expressions, and that definitely carried over in the clay."

When Rocknak read Poe as an American studies major at Colby College, and even while later earning a philosophy Ph.D. at Boston University in the 1990s, she was only vaguely aware of Poe's Boston connection. "I think there are a lot of people living in Boston who don't know he was born here," says Rocknak. "It wasn't forefront in my mind…and I certainly had no idea that I'd make a public art statue for Boston; that would have blown me away had I known." Now, it would be hard for anyone to miss Poe's dynamic presence, and the statue has begun to turn golden at the edges where passers-by stop and touch it.

It has been nearly a year since Rocknak, who now lives and works in Oneonta, N.Y., has visited her own sculpture. She plans to check on Poe this December, and to walk around the Common greeting Boston's other statues—even the ones on horseback. —Olivia J. Kiers
